6. Re: Matching Tier Level from other players clubs. 10 years ago, yes, I showed cosmo my gold mlife and they tier matched. May 15 ish. No line pass or complimentary room upgrade. Its not very attractive. Their "gold" line quoted me 20 bucks less than their site had up, I think I was looking at $290.

I can't change, I guess. I keep saving my comps for some rainy day that might come up in the future.

The more you bet and the longer you play the higher the level of comp you can expect.

And I know that there's no way to solve the problem of those necessary but dreadful deadlines — five to six weeks before publication — the enemy of completely accurate up-to-date information.

If, however, you think of yourself as a Flamboyant Competitive Risk Taker and you're playing roulette or slots, it might explain why you're not getting as much enjoyment as you want in a casino.

Casinos change. Notice I didn't preface that sentence with "sometimes." Casinos change perhaps more often than any other businesses on Earth.

Your upgraded membership could include player benefits such as VIP-only promotions, VIP line privileges, cash comps, and a specialized host team. Plus all the FUN that only Barona is known for! Visit Club Barona or Call VIP Reservations for more details on our tier matching at 1-877-737-4847.

Since most casino status matches start with Wyndham, we're going to use that for our step by step guide.

These are what you have if you can't place a casino in either a "top" or "bottom" category. Because there are so many of them, the range of comp benefits, thus the range of betting requirements, is broad.

This means that the players with the most comps are the biggest losers over all. Sure they are getting rooms and show and many other amenities but they are paying for them in the long run.

So I walked over and congratulated him on his jackpot. He didn't seem the least bit thrilled; he didn't even smile. I was more excited than he was, just seeing a $100,000 royal on the machine.

Then we started "collecting" casinos, using the same routine: playing, getting rated, and fielding free room offers. After we switched to video poker and joined the slot clubs, we went through the same procedure, playing in one "core" casino until we'd reached the required level for the free-room offers, then adding one casino at a time.

For the dollar machine player, and in many casinos even for the frequent and/or heavy quarter player, using a casino host system will let them reap more comps than just tapping into slot club benefits or depending on mail offers.

Who wouldn't love a free cruise? Thanks to a status match offer from Carnival Cruise Line, you could receive a free cruise once you do some very simple legwork upfront.

Always make sure your card is registering properly so you get credit for your play. Also check at the Player's Club if you are entitled to any freebies just for joining (casinos often have promotions to entice players to sign up).

I am with you on this. I was approved for Diamond after 30 days, and they downgraded me back to Gold. I did this through the Wyndham hotel status as I am still diamond there.

You should definitely do the Wynn Match while you're there (it's available through August 31) and I would do Mlife as well since their status carries at all their locations. As far as Penn, I don't see any status matches available, though I wonder if he might try the players club at specific My Choice casinos.

Casino Mailers: Sent with the purpose of getting you inside the casino, they tend to be good— otherwise they wouldn't work

The issuing of comps is one of the greatest marketing tools that the casinos have devised. Everyone enjoys being recognized and made to feel important and appreciated and comps are a way of doing this.

The only issue here is that even if you hold current status with a players club based on an extension they request that you upload the original card. Casinos usually don't send these cards by mail but instead ask you to pick them up in person at the club booth. This means if you haven't been to a casino in a long time and your current card is expired you might need to make a trip just to pick up a new card.

Parking and traffic on the Strip can be a problem, especially if there's a convention or special event in town; it's easy to find a spot and get in and out quickly at many locals' spots, even though they're further apart.

In some casinos you can use your Player's Card to get rated while others issue a different rating card for table players. If unsure just inquire at the Players Club or ask a casino host.

In the video below, Steve Bourie, author of the American Casino Guide, explains exactly how the casino comping system works for table game players.

And he answered, "Well, yeah, but I've dropped a hundred grand into these machines over the last few days."

However, the best way, in my opinion, is to stay at your machine and tell a slot attendant you would like to speak to a host as soon as possible.

Also, getting comps through a host often does not decrease your slot club benefits or your direct-mail offers. So learning your way around the host system can make the whole casino comp system more flexible for you.

Likewise the cruise lines themselves operate players clubs of their onboard casinos that often dole out offers for repeat cruises based on the gaming volume over the course of a particular cruise and with the cruise market hoping to make a comeback soon Carnival is now dipping into the market.

Actually the biggest job is to go through my bulging files and decide which information is crying out the loudest to be shared.

These are usually the older and/or smaller casinos in a jurisdiction; they often look “tired,” if not actually rundown and shabby.

When you sit down to play just slide the card to the dealer with your buy-in and the dealer will hand it to the floor supervisor, who will begin the rating process (in some casinos the dealer has a device on the table that he/she uses to swipe your card to initiate the rating process).

If you want to redeem offers on the Strip be careful because some of the locations using a map are deceptive. The Wynn and Venetian, for example, look close together, but it takes a long time to get from one to another on foot.

If you want to see the ultimate marketing tool, all you have to do is turn on one of the television shows profiling the “high rollers” and see the tours of the luxury suites with the butlers where they stay and the lavish gifts that the casinos give them.

A few weeks later, we were in a tiny shabby casino in North Las Vegas, in a blue-collar neighborhood. Brad and I were there only because of a valuable coupon play.

And the man replied, “We’re having a blast! You know, your money lasts such a long time on these machines!”
