With online roulette, there's no time limit. So whenever you're ready, hit the 'Spin' button. This will release the ball into the virtual wheel.

The wheel will come to a stop and the ball will settle into a pocket. Online roulette games use a random number generator (or RNG for short) to determine the outcome.

Hold your breath. If you're in luck, you'll receive a payout. The next round begins after the result.

The roulette table is arranged into two sections: the inside and the outside. The inside area has 36 numbered squares which are either red or black. The outside area has boxes that cover a broader range of numbers – like odd or even. At the top of the table, there's also a large zero or double zero depending on the game.

You can bet on any of the squares on the table or even a combination of them. To learn more about placing bets, check out our roulette bet types guide.

Roulette wheels are numbered from 0 to 36. On European wheels, there are 18 red pockets, 18 black pockets, and a single green 0. American roulette wheels are the same, but with an additional green 00 pocket.

However, the numbers don't run in order around the wheel. The sequence is designed to balance high, low, odd, and even numbers. And on top of that, the wheels are different for European and American roulette. It's not as complicated as it sounds though – take a look at the two variations you'll come across below.

There are three main types of roulette to play: European, American and French, with live roulette versions available at many online casinos.

European roulette is the most common roulette game at online casinos. The European wheel has 37 pockets numbered from 0 to 36. The single zero brings the house edge, also known as the casino's advantage, down to just 2.7%. The low house edge is one of the reasons European roulette is a favorite among players.

You can learn the full ins and outs of the game with our European roulette guide.

American roulette is a Las Vegas classic. The game sees a double zero added to the wheel, meaning there are 38 pockets in total. This extra pocket doesn't change the rules, but it does affect a player's odds of winning. The house edge for this variant sits at 5.26%, meaning the odds favor the house more so than with European roulette.

French roulette uses the same wheel as European roulette and has all the same betting options. However, there are two unique rules: 'la partage' and 'en prison'. These rules act as insurance and mean that players only lose half of their wager if the ball lands on zero. Besides that, the rules of French roulette remain the same.

Live roulette is an online version of roulette that uses a live dealer. You can find live versions of American, European, and French roulette – the only difference is that the games are streamed and played in real time. The dealer will spin the wheel, and you can join tables to play with other online players.

The 'house edge' is the advantage that a casino has over a player. For each casino game, the house edge is written as a percentage. The higher the percentage, the larger the advantage for the house.

European and French roulette wheels have 37 pockets, numbered from 0 to 36. The numbers are split evenly between black and red, except for the single green 0. The pockets of an American roulette wheel are the same but with an additional 00.

The best bet for a big payout is a single number wager. Any bet on a single number has odds of 37 to 1 and so offers a huge reward. That said, the chances of this bet winning are far less likely than say red or black, or another outside bet.

How casino play roulette in to vegas

A bet on a single number pays 35 to 1. This includes any bets made on the green 0 or 00 pockets. Odd or even number bets payout at 1 to 1, and so do bets on 18 numbers like 1-18 or 19-36.

Green bets have odds of 35 to 1, so you would win 35 times your stake wagered. If you were to bet on 0 and 00 at the same time in American roulette, the payout would be 17 to 1.

Yes, you can bet on both red and black at the same time. Most would advise against this though, as the bets effectively cancel each other out. The green pocket is also in play meaning there's a chance you'd lose on both bets regardless.

For a better chance of winning, stick to outside bets. Though they payout less, outside bets have far better odds of winning than inside bets.

In online roulette, you place a bet simply by clicking the relevant part of the roulette board, after selecting your bet amount. You can take as much time as you need. In a real casino, you would do the same by physically placing chips on the board with a croupier present. The croupier tells the table when betting is over and then spins the wheel.

The first French roulette wheels in Paris originally used red table layouts with red for the single zero. Nowadays, French roulette tables are only red at some physical casinos. Green is the preference for online roulette because it helps avoid any color confusion at the table.
