Two banking rules come into play vis-a-vis online gambling. First, if you have a foreign bank account(s), and at any time during the year you have $10,000 in the account, you must report the account. You must do this in two ways: first, by checking the box on Schedule B of Form 1040 that asks this question. Additionally, you must file a report of Foreign Bank and Financial Accounts (Form TD F 90-22.1) with the US Department of the Treasury (not the IRS).

“Gambling” in Washington, requires all three of the following elements to be present: 1) staking something of value as consideration, 2) on the outcome of a contest of chance or a future event, 3) upon the agreement that a prize will be awarded in the event of a certain outcome. If you are wagering money or something else of value on an online game of chance for the opportunity to win a prize of value. Then you are online gambling and it is unlawful and subject to penalties under the Gambling Act you are prohibited from doing this online in Washington.

Some states don't permit any gambling and other states have fully legalized online casinos, sportsbooks, bingo, and daily fantasy sports (DFS). Here are the forms of legal online gambling USA players can participate in:

There are many forms of legal gambling in Ohio, including daily fantasy sports, a lottery, poker, casino games and betting on horse racing. The gambling laws in Ohio are currently some of the most likely to change, particularly when talking about the sports betting sections. Senator John Eklund seems to be pushing the legislation forward as much as possible in the wake of the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act (PAPSA) being overturned. Eklund has been outspoken about his rather realistic outlook that, as more and more neighboring states begin to legalize sports betting, Ohioans will cross the borders to place their bets, or continue to bet illegally within the state borders.

There is no U.S. federal law against gambling online, as a player. At the federal level, gambling online is perfectly legal, because of the lack of a law against
it. (But it might be illegal in your state.

As with many other states, Ohio has long offered pari-mutuel betting on horse racing as its primary style of sports betting. That does look like it will soon open up to include many more types of sports betting, with the state’s Governor expecting new legislation to pass in 2019. At the time of writing, there is a bill in play but there have not been any further moves as yet, so the practice of betting on sports either online or in person in Ohio is still illegal. For detailed info, you can refer to the page dedicated to Ohio sports betting.

The District of Columbia became the first jurisdiction to

Well, you're probably thinking that there's no particular difference between netting and this result. That's wrong, for three reasons. First, if you don't itemize your deductions (because you don't have enough deductions to itemize) you lose out on your gambling losses. In such a situation your gambling losses are presumed to be part of your standard deduction. Second, many items on the tax return are tied to Adjusted Gross Income (AGI). The prescribed method for handling gambling income and losses increases AGI (even if the taxable income remains unchanged). This can limit some taxpayers' other deductions, including medical and miscellaneous itemized deductions. Finally, gambling losses can, in certain circumstances, trigger the dreaded Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT). And gambling losses aren't deductible in the AMT.

Each state with legal online gambling sites has its own gambling authority. These organizations oversee and enforce gambling laws in their respective jurisdictions. They apply fines, penalties, and other forms of punishment to keep operators in check.

As more states began to see the potential benefits of legalizing online gambling, more states started approving legislation. Since each state has different laws, you should verify what's legal and what isn't in your area so you stay on the right side of the law.

4. "In the end it would be up to a court." Well, anyone can bring a case in Tax Court. Since there has yet to be a case in Tax Court on online gambling, it's unlikely you'll end up paying a frivolous penalty. But you're going to lose. There have been many Tax Court cases dealing with the issue of constructive receipt. The opinion in a recent case, Millard v. Commissioner (TC Memo 2005-192) notes, "Consequently, a cash method taxpayer constructively receives income as of the date that a check is received absent a substantial limitation. Furstenberg v. Commissioner, 83 T.C. 755, 791 n.28 (1984); Kahler v. Commissioner, 18 T.C. 31, 34-35 (1952); Roberts v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2002-281." Now, I find it hard to believe that the Tax Court would rule that money put in a players' online casino account wasn't constructively received.

Around April 15th this page starts getting a lot of visitors. Since it's that time again I decided to update this article to provide more concise answers to common questions about paying taxes on online gambling winnings in the US.

As it stands, the forms of legal online gambling in the USA available to you depend on where you are. For instance, online sports betting is growing rapidly, but online casinos are only legal in a handful of areas. Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia have broadly legalized online gambling.

At the federal level, taking sports bets online is plainly illegal, thanks to the federal Wire Act, unless a state has specifically legalized it.

On every federal tax return, you must include your occupation. This is a statutory requirement. However, you do not have to incriminate yourself (the Fifth Amendment). There is nothing wrong with an online gambler (filing as a professional) calling himself a professional gambler. That’s a correct description of what he or she does. Be forewarned that if you are stupid enough to put down on your tax return that you are in an illegal occupation (e.g. “illegal drug dealer”), you can have your name forwarded by the IRS to other law enforcement.
