While gaming in New York remains unregulated, it is highly likely that this will change at some point down the line. Over the past couple of years, there have been some legislators that have attempted to push bills that would allow for at least regulated online poker in the state. In September 2015, there was even a hearing in front of the state's Senate Standing Committee on Racing, Gaming and Wagering, in which several casino executives made it clear they would like to see such an opportunity made available to them. That comes as little surprise: with a population of nearly 20 million, this may be one of the few states that can actually support a poker site on its own.
