The former Soviet Socialist republic of Lithuania has a population of more than 2.9 million people. Located on the eastern shore of the Baltic Sea, the Republic of Lithuania borders the countries of Latvia, Belarus, Poland and the Russian region of Kaliningrad. With a total area of approximately 65,200 km<sup>2</sup>, it ranks 24th on the list of Europe's largest countries. Lithuania gained independence in 1990 and the northeastern European country is famous for its fabulous national parks. Additionally, Lithuanian is one of the oldest languages on the globe. Lithuania even has its own perfume (unisex), called 'the Scent of Lithuania', while Cepelinai is probably the country's most famous dish. Gambling is legal in the Baltic state, and locals can enjoy their favorite games of luck at several land-based casinos. Lithuanians are also allowed to make sports wagers, with the same applying for online gaming sites licensed by the national Gaming Control Authority (GCA). The latter blocks foreign-based online casinos that operate on the Lithuanian market without the required licenses.

The Gambling Act 2001 regulates gambling in Lithuania. The Gambling Act was later amended and supplemented. Licenses for organizing gambling are issued by the Gaming Control Authority (lpt.lrv.lt/). The Gaming Control Authority, set up in 2001 under the Ministry of Finance, supervises the activities of gambling operators in Lithuania and carries out control in the area of gambling. After obtaining licenses for organizing gambling activities, companies also need permits from the Gaming Control Authority to open casinos and slot halls as well as to organize online gambling.

There are plenty of games to try out at many online casinos in Lithuania. Before making a choice, though, look at the game's RTP ("Return To Player" rate – high RTP slots are usually above 97%), as well as volatility and provider.

In Lithuania, online gambling winnings are considered as a part of taxable income. As such, a 15% tax is applied to winnings below 120 average wages (€148,968 in 2020), and 20% to winnings over that amount.

Customer support is in many ways the most important factor when it comes to having a smooth online gaming experience. Without proper channels where you can seek reassurance for any issues or questions you may have, it's unlikely you'll have a good time at the casino. The good news is that online casinos that accept Lithuanian players usually operate 24/7 live chat support service. What's more, requests for help via live chat are usually settled within a few minutes. Moreover, you can often resort to telephone support via International toll-free numbers. If your query is not urgent, email support is always available as well, although response times go up to 24 hours.
