Professional sporting events may still be few and far between under wide-ranging coronavirus restrictions, but as of Thursday, sports fans in Illinois can bet on games online.

Rivers Casino Des Plaines and Rush Street Interactive launched the state's first online sportsbook at 10 a.m. Thursday at BetRivers. Users can sign up from home and place bets from their desktop or mobile device as they watch games live from the site, the companies said in a news release.

"We are excited to make history in bringing the first online sportsbook to sports fans in our home state just in time as American sports are coming back into action," Richard Schwartz, president of Chicago-based Rush Street Interactive, said in the release.

Users can bet on Premier League soccer, golf, motor sports and UFC, all of which started up again recently. The NBA, WBNA and NHL are scheduled to begin next month, the release noted. And MLB is negotiating with the players union to restart its season in July.

The launch comes two weeks after Gov. J.B. Pritzker temporarily suspended the in-person registration requirement for sports wagering while the state remains under a disaster proclamation. Though many Illinois businesses have started to welcome back customers under the state's five-phase reopening plan, Illinois casinos remain closed.

Illinois had projected sports betting would generate between $384 million and $680 million per year in adjusted gross wagering receipts — revenue after winnings are paid. At the enacted tax rate of 15%, that would result in annual state tax revenues of between $58 million and $102 million.

Rivers and Argosy Casino Alton briefly opened their bricks-and-mortar sportsbooks in March under provisional licenses before the operations were shut down by COVID-19 stay-at-home orders. Earlier this month, the Illinois Gaming Board approved sports betting licenses for seven of the state's 10 casinos through 2024.

The licenses are part of a massive gambling expansion signed into law last year allowing casinos, racetracks and several large sporting venues to offer legal sports betting in Illinois.

DES PLAINES, IL (March 2, 2020) — Don't know your over-under from your moneyline and confused about how to parlay your interest in sports with placing a bet at a newly legalized Illinois sportsbook? Fear not. At Rivers Casino Des Plaines' soon-to-be-open BetRivers Sportsbook, resident expert Ross Sansone is making it simple for you.

Online illinois sportsbook casino rivers

“The sports betting terms can intimidate even the biggest sports fan, but with a few pointers, you can have a lot of fun and win some money--and you don’t even have to bet against your favorite team, even if they are the underdog,” Sansone said.

As Illinois prepares for sports betting to begin in time for college basketball’s “March Madness” tournament, BetRivers’ Sansone, known to some as “Rivers Ross” is providing a “Sports Betting 101” outline of the basics for each bet that can be made and definitions of common terms.

Casino rivers illinois online sportsbook

Sansone says there are four main types of bets that Illinois residents will be able to make.

“A wager on the moneyline is one of the most basic bets you can make. It’s as simple as picking the winning team,” he said. The favorite team is the team expected to win. This side of the bet is usually denoted with a minus “-” sign. The underdog team on the moneyline is the team that’s expected to lose, usually listed with a plus “+” sign. The signs help you quickly figure out how each side will pay, if that side wins: The minus sign means the payout will be less than the original bet, the plus means the payout will be more than the original bet. Reading the odds for a money line bet is simple. If a team is +120, this means they are the underdog. If that team wins, your $100 bet will win you an additional $120. If a team is shown -160 that means they’re a favorite (expected to win). You’ll need to make a $160 bet to be paid $100 in winnings if that team wins.

Online sportsbook casino illinois rivers

Example: The Chicago Bears are playing the Green Bay Packers and the Packers are favored to win at -120. If you decide to bet for the Packers, and you wanted to win $100, you would have to bet $120.

“A point spread bet has become more and more popular. When you bet on the point spread, it isn’t on who will win or lose. It’s a bet on how much the win or loss will be,” said Sansone. Similar to a moneyline bet, the “+” sign represents the underdog team and the “-” represents the favorite team. But in a point spread bet, another number is added. That is the number of points a team needs to win by for you to win your bet. There is usually an additional number in parentheses that tells you what the payout will be if you win.

Online casino rivers sportsbook illinois

Example: If the Chicago Bears are the 8.5 favorite (-8.5) over the Detroit Lions (+8.5), perhaps you want to place a $100 bet on Chicago winning and covering the spread. In this hypothetical game, if Chicago wins by 9 points the Bears would not only win the game, but you would win your bet. If the Bears only win by 6 points—maybe because they “double-dinked” a field goal in the closing seconds—you would lose your point spread bet. “When you hear someone say ‘my team didn’t cover,’ they are referring to losing a point spread bet,” he said.

An Over/Under bet is a wager on the combined total number of points scored by both teams in a game. That’s why it’s often called a “totals” bet. “You’re just trying to predict whether the total points scored in a game will be higher or lower than a set number. It’s an exciting way to bet on the action of a game without picking a winner or loser,” Sansone added. Reading the odds for an over/under, or “total” bet is simple. When the over/under is set for the Bears vs. Packers game at 37.5 and the combined score of both teams adds up to 38 or more, the “over” wins. If the total is 37 or less, the “under” wins. A unique aspect of an over/under bet, according to Sansone, is you can have a tie. “Occasionally, the total is set as a whole number. Using the Bears vs. Packers example again, if the over/under is 38 and the combined point total for the Bears and the Packers is 38 you have what is called a “push”--or a tie--and you get your money back.”

Casino rivers online illinois sportsbook

This is a single wager that links together two or more individual bets. If any of the bets in the parlay lose, the entire parlay loses. But if all the linked bets win, the parlay wins — and the payouts can be huge. “It’s an example of higher risk for higher reward,” said Sansone.

Sansone said you may hear fellow sports book customers using insider-sounding terms. “At the sportsbook and often on sports radio you’ll hear people use this language to sound like they are in-the-know,” he said.

Illinois rivers online casino sportsbook

- Bankroll: The money you have at your disposal with which to bet.
- Betting line: The odds used to determine the payout of wagers, for example, the lines move as bets are made and team news like injuries are reported.

Illinois casino rivers online sportsbook

- First-Half Bet: A wager on the first half of a sporting event only, and not the outcome.
- Prop bets: Increasing in popularity, this can be anything from the outcome of the coin flip at the Super Bowl to the number of touchdowns Kansas City Quarterback Patrick Mahomes will throw today.

Illinois sportsbook online rivers casino

“Sports betting has its own language, but don’t get caught up in what other people say. These simple tips --along with only betting what you can afford to lose from your bankroll--should help you have fun at the BetRivers Sportsbook or at other sportsbook locations,” Sansone said.

Rivers Casino in Des Plaines became the first to market for mobile sports betting in Illinois, launching its online sportsbook at BetRivers.com on Thursday.

Illinois Gov. J.B. Pritzker accelerated the timeline for mobile sports betting availability June 4 when he issued Executive Order 2020-41, suspending the provision that required in-person registration for bettors to obtain a mobile app. Last Thursday, the Illinois Gaming Board granted Rivers and six other casinos Master Sports Wagering licenses, a requirement for casinos to then ask the board's approval to operate as an Online Sports Wagering Operator.

"We are excited to make history in bringing the first online sportsbook to sports fans in our home state just in time as American sports are coming back into action," said Richard Schwartz, president of Rush Street Interactive, in a statement.

Rivers, which is located just outside Chicago's city limits and near O'Hare International Airport, was also the first in Illinois to accept in-person sports bets in March, though BetRivers Sportsbook was active less than one week before being shuttered — along with Illinois' nine other casinos — due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Pritzker legalized sports betting last June when he signed a $12 billion capital bill into law that greatly expanded gaming in the Land of Lincoln.

Illinois sportsbook online rivers casino

The state's casinos are still closed due to the pandemic, with the earliest possible reopening date June 26 if the state advances to Phase 4 of Restore Illinois. The IGB provided casinos with reopening protocols June 10 but did not establish a reopening date.

Illinois is the 11th state (the District of Columbia also has mobile sports betting) to launch mobile sports betting and the third in the Midwest with bordering states Indiana and Iowa. The Hoosier State has remote registration, which was a draw to Chicago-area residents with nearby casinos across the state line, while the Hawkeye State requires in-person registration until that provision sunsets at year's end.

The bill the governor signed into law last year included an 18-month "penalty box" provision — aimed at DraftKings and FanDuel — for mobile-only operators to go live, which was to begin after the first "Owners" sports betting license was issued in Illinois. The rule was intended to punish both operators for continuing to operate daily fantasy contests in Illinois after former Attorney General Lisa Madigan issued an opinion that DFS constituted illegal gambling.

With BetRivers going live, the urgency for the two online giants to enter Illinois has climbed higher. When Pritzker issued the Executive Order, sources at FanDuel told Sports Handle they were "pleased with the development and exploring options to be live in Illinois as soon as possible."

FanDuel has been engaged in talks to purchase Fairmount Park Racetrack in Collinsville, Ill., which also has access to the St. Louis market.

Online sportsbook rivers casino illinois

DraftKings has also moved to align itself with a retail sportsbook, submitting an application for a Management Services Provider license in late April, according to the IGB's official website. It remains to be seen who its potential partner in Illinois will be.

Penn National could be the next to market since the Argosy in Alton had also been provisionally approved to accept wagers before the COVID-19 pandemic, but PointsBet may also be in the running to be second. It has a deal in place to be the sportsbook at Hawthorne Racecourse, which is waiting word on approval for its sports betting license as part of a larger racino license.

Casino sportsbook online rivers illinois

The third track in Illinois, Arlington Park, has applied only for a sports betting license and is expected to use BetAmerica for mobile sports betting. Arlington Park is owned by Churchill Downs Incorporated, which purchased a 62% stake in Rivers Casino in March 2019 and is teaming with Rush Street Interactive for a potential casino in Waukegan.

Going live at this moment looks to be optimal than in weeks past as more U.S. and international sports are returning to action. The PGA Tour saw a notable bump in attention upon its return last week, with in-play betting popular, and the English Premier League resumed play Wednesday after 100 days due to the pandemic-enforced recess.

NASCAR, the German Bundesliga, and Korean Baseball have been in action for weeks, and the U.S. market is set to pick up next month with the return of the NBA, NHL, MLS, and WNBA. Major League Baseball and its Players' Association are reportedly close to a deal that would result in a season of at least 60 games with an expanded playoffs.
