A few days after this article was published, TikTok announced in response to these concerns that it is conducting an audit of all accounts with unpaid subscription fees. As of April 2021, various media outlets reported that TikTok had managed to identify tens of millions of accounts which were involved in posting content on the platform without having paid for it. The publication also reported that the video service was working with legal and other experts to help recommend steps which could be taken against people who had posted content without paying for it. A representative for TikTok told a news outlet that "We are always taking measures to ensure our community is able to enjoy the best TikTok experience possible. When we identify that an account has been using features without paying subscriptions, we interrupt services so they can upgrade. We also work closely with our legal team to take action against all accounts that don't comply with our Terms of Use.";

1. The first screenshot tells us about how the layout of TikTok works. It keeps users locked in a loop where they're forced to either watch videos or create videos on the app. 2. The second screenshot talks about the loading time of TikTok, which is reported to be quite long even though it's supposed to load within seconds (the video should load under 10 seconds). For the people who are using older smartphones, it'll take even longer for them to load it and even render it as a result.";
